BBC - History - Ancient History in depth: Akhenaten and the Amarna Period

Amarna is an extensive Egyptian archaeological site that represents the remains of the capital city newly established (BC) and built by the Pharaoh Akhenaten of the late Eighteenth Dynasty, and abandoned shortly after his death (BC). The area is located on the east bank of the Nile River in the modern Egyptian.

The Mysterious Disappearance of Nefertiti, Ruler of the Nile | Ancient Origins

It is the city erected by the heretic Pharaoh Akhenaten to escape from the old capital of Thebes, though it was abandoned soon after his death and then remained virtually untouched till Amarna sprawled out along the side of the River Nile.

Akhenaten: mad, bad, or brilliant? - Telegraph archaeological site of Amarna occupies a great bay of desert beside the River Nile. Following Thutmose's unexpected death, though, he became the heir apparent. The site he chose, at modern-day Amarna, was called Akhetaten, his tomb contained "shabti" figurines that were heresy for Atenism.

Virtually nothing of Amarna remains, as shortly after the death of Akhenaten, the priests returned to Luxor and re-instated the worship of the 'old' gods and branded Akhenaten a heretic. Almost miles south of Cairo, in the heart of Middle Egypt the archaeological site of Amarna occupies a great bay of desert beside the River Nile. Malcolm Hobson investigates.
