Composer, Arranger.

Mozart ended up visiting London several times, influenced by Johann Christian Bach. In fact, Mozart's Vienna career began very early. When Wolfgang was four as noted by his father in his sister's music book he was playing the same pieces as his sister. Mozart lived at the center of Viennese musical life, and knew a great number of people, including not just his fellow musicians, but also theatrical performers, fellow transplanted Salzburgers, and many aristocrats, including a fairly close acquaintance with the Emperor, Joseph II.

Mozart completed the Jupiter Symphony in just three years before his death. He gave to Mozart mounted concerts with himself as soloist, presenting three or four new piano concertos in each season. This is a unique number assigned, in regular chronological order, to every one of his known works.
