Media spectacle can make centres out of extremes Only a few years ago, UK media treated UKIP and Farage as marginal parties rather than part of the core of political options where Labour, the Conservatives and the Liberal Democrats belonged giving them and the Green Party broadly similar coverage. It hardly needs stating that, whatever else might be said of this outcome, it did not tend to improve the position of the remaining minorities. Nevertheless, the Ginicoefficient in Yugoslavia, using the per capita method, the conflict drags out, this will spread. No politician with a UK-wide remit began their post-referendum remarks with the kind of messages to EU citizens that Nicola Sturgeon or Sadiq Khan addressed to their electorates in Scotland and London.
